PRESENTS THE STAR OF THE MONTH!

Will Hutchins

At UCLA, students in the Theatre Arts Department have become familiar with the phrase "Hutch style," which was first used to denote the off-beat, pixilated histrionics of a graduate student, Will Hutchins, who, in 1954-55, was working for his MA degree in motion picture production.

Despite his overpowering instinct to provide all his acting assignments with comedy overtones, this tall, diffident student of the drama won his first spurs in a serious role in TV's "Matinee Theatre," and now has his professional career launched as a resolute fellow in the Warner Bros.-produced, ABC-TV western series "Sugarfoot."

Following his successful TV debut on "Matinee," the young actor got bids from three major studios to test for long-term contracts. "Hutch" accepted the Warner offer to star in a "Conflict" tele-drama, "The Magic Brew," last summer. William T. Orr, in charge of TV production at Warner Bros., and the producer of the ABC-TV series, Roy Huggins, came to the decision that the boy was contract material while this show was in the rough-cut stage.

In the meantime, Will had returned to "Matinee Theatre" to star in "The Remittance Man" and "Letter of Introduction."

A term contract was effected early in September, 1956. Once Orr had completed these negotiations, he and Huggins decided to put Hutchins before the cameras as the star of another "Conflict" drama, "Stranger on the Road." This was followed by the dramatic lead in still another "Conflict," entitled "Capital Punishment."

Then the studio decided to star

Hutchins in his own series.

Will Hutchins was born on May 5, 1932, in Los Angeles, Calif. His father, deceased, was a dentist, as is his grandfather, who still practices in Los Angeles. Will has one brother, an architect.

Hutchins attended Glen Feliz Grammar School and John Marshall High School in Los Angeles and was graduated with a B.A. degree in drama from Pomona College in 1952.

While in college, Will participated in track and basketball. He starred in such plays as "Ah, Wilderness!" and "All My Sons."

He also produced and acted in "Run for Cover," a musical revue at the Ivar Theatre in Hollywood.

Will was drafted into the Army in 1952 and served overseas in Paris as a cryptographer with the Signal Corps. Following his discharge in 1954, with the rank of corporal, he entered U.S.C.A.

He is a devotee of jazz; his collection numbering about 800 jazz records. His favorite musician is Louis Armstrong. For relaxation, Hutchins likes to write poetry and do calisthenics. He has always wanted to be a boxer.

His favorite foods are corn pudding, corn in a casserole and corn on the cob. He prefers conservative type clothes, usually tweeds.

His favorite authors are Hemingway and Salinger. His favorite color is blue. Before becoming an actor, he worked as a special delivery messenger, bus boy, grocery store clerk, delivery boy and hand bill passer.

Hutchins notes he doesn't plan to get married for at least four or five years. But when he does, he says it'll probably be to an actress.
